A CHRISTMAS DINNER

At Eighty-Five Degrees South Latitude.

In describing his dash for the South Pole in the October McClure's Lieutenant Shackleton says:

"December 25th, Christmas Day." I wrote in my diary. Forty eight degrees of frost, drift snow, and a strong biting south wind; such has been the order of the day. Marched from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m., up one of the steepest rises we have yet done, crevassed in places. Were 9,500 feet above sea level and our latitude at 6 p. m. 85 degrees and 55 minutes south. We started away at 7 a. m., after a good breakfast, and soon came to soft snow, through which our worn and torn sledge-runners dragged heavily. All morning we hauled along, and at noon we had done 5 miles 250 yards. Sights gave us 85 degrees 51 minutes south. We had lunch then, and I took a picture of the camp with the Queen's flag flying, and our sledge flags, and with my companions in the picture.

"It was cold, the temperature being 16 degrees F., and the wind went through us. All afternoon we worked steadily up hill, and could see at 6 p. m., new land plainly trending to the southeast. Camped at 6 p. m., wind increasing. We had a splendid dinner. First hoosh, consisting of pony ration boiled up with pemmican, some of our emergency Oxo, and biscuit; then, in the cocoa water I boiled our little plum pudding, which a friend of Wild's had given him. This with a drop of medical brandy, was a luxury which Lucullus himself would have envied. Then cocoa, and lastly cigars and a spoonful of creme de menthe sent us by a friend in Scotland.

"We are full tonight, and it is the last time we shall be for a many long day. After dinner we discussed the situation, and have decided to reduce our food still further."

The October Review of Reviews comes out with a group of striking articles on the discovery of the North Pole. Besides the character sketch of Commander Peary, which, while unsigned, is understood to have been written by one who has long enjoyed a close acquaintance with the explorer and an intimate knowledge of his work, there is a popular scientific article on the discovery and its significance by Cyrus C. Adams, the geographer, and these are followed by an extended interview with Dr. Cook reported by W. T. Stead from Copenhagen. These three articles were written exclusively for the Review of Reviews during the month of September after the world had been thrilled by the news flashed from the Shetland Islands and from the distant coast of Labrador. The securing and publication of these articles within so short a time is a feat unparalleled in monthly magazine journalism.

The Delineator

For November.

Every college student in the United States should read "My Ideal of the True University," by President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton University in The Delineator for November. Dr. Wilson's view of education in its highest and largest meaning is inspiring. Another article of educational interest is "If the Japanese Should Rear Your Children," by Adachi Kinnosuke, who gives the people of our Occidental civilization much to think about. "Kentucky's Fight for an Education," by Mabel Potter Daggett, is a remarkable social study. It tells what Southern women can do when they concentrate their efforts on a public movement. In this November the Rev. Edward Tallmadge Root discusses "The Alleged Decline in Church Attendance" and supplies statistics that are not altogether discouraging to American church-goers.

The fashions for the month are reviewed and charmingly illustrated and there are many clever suggestions for Thanksgiving dinners and Thanksgiving entertainments.

Home Seekers rates to the Northwest and Southwest on first and third Tuesdays. For further information call on agent Illinois Central. T. L. MORROW, Agent.
